7. Supervision of junior researchers

Bachelor Theses (Konstanz), Master Theses (Bern), 1 PhD Thesis (Bern)

The Swiss “Ambizione” Grant has allowed me to develop a formal record of co-supervising my first PhD student, an opportunity that is otherwise not available to early career researchers in the German and Swiss system. In Konstanz, I have informally co-advised BA and MA students at the chair of Jürgen Osterhammel and helped to coordinate his research group “Global Processes”, consisting of five BA students, four MA students, five doctoral researchers and three postdocs.

8. Teaching activities

Substantial teaching experiences in English and German in the fields of Modern Economic, European and Global History, Environmental History and the History of Resources, Industrialization, Commodity Frontiers, Plantation Economies, Indentured Labour and Slavery, the History of Science and Knowledge, Mobility and Euro-Asian entanglements, with a focus on India, Japan, and Southeast Asia, on Bachelor, Master and PhD level in Cambridge, Konstanz and Bern. In all, 20 seminars, courses, one practical course on museology in cooperation with a museum in Munich.

Advanced training and university didactic courses, both at Cambridge University, 2013:

- University didactic: teaching methods for research seminars, supervisions, block courses
- University didactic: organizing classes (BA and MA)

List of taught university classes: (* = in English)University of Bern (CH) (2018–2021)
